

Aeolian Islands

Stromboli

The Aeolian archipelago is situated in the Tyrrhenian Sea north of Sicily and is composed of seven principal islands and a few islets. These beautiful islands are quite rugged, with splendid views.

- Lipari is the largest island. Of interest is the Spanish castle, the Aeolian Archeological Museum, the Cathedral, and its churches. The island has many natural attractions including Ponente Beach.
- Vulcano is the nearest island to mainland Sicily. The island has contrasting beaches, one coloured and the other black volcanic sand. With fumaroles and thermal springs, the island is a plateau on which stands Monte Aria and the crater Fossa Grande.

- Salina, the "green island", has the highest mount of the Archipelago, the Mountains Fossa delle Felci and dei Porri. Its spring water permits an intense agriculture. Noteworthy is its Malvasia vines, fruit, capers and cactus fruit.
- Stromboli, is formed by a volcanic cone of 926 metres which is still active. The other areas are inhabited and covered with vineyards, olive and caper groves.
- Panarea is an uncontaminated paradise with rich and rare fauna, it offers the possibility of multiple excursions, among which the Conca di Calcara is worth particular attention.
